

OUT OF ALLY BAND BIO

After playing in several bands, Domi decided one warm August evening at the lake to talk to Stefan about forming a new band. The latter denied with the statement: "The time doesn't fit, but if, then with YOU one day."

2 years later they found each other again in Domi's old band room. They had the same idea of the bass player, and he brought the guitarist with him. Giuli and Marc joined them and the band was born.

"Pristine" as the original name was to be used from then on. After the first recordings and concerts, however, they realised that the name had already been used by a Scandinavian band - rookie mistake! So they got together over beer and vodka and looked for a new name. "Out of Ally" was the result - the meaning remains a secret.

The old studio of Marc and Giuli's cover band quickly crystallised as the band room. But a refreshment was needed, and so it was a matter of using manpower (paint, buckets, flex...) to make the room suitable for bands. No sooner said than done, and in a few weeks the new room shone like never before.

Since then, Out of Ally has been rehearsing regularly, playing gig after gig, and enjoying an ever-growing fan base.
